Wet wipes and our septic system

Please read and take note if the drainage system blocks it is immediate and putting anything other than toilet tissue down will block this system disrupted your holiday

Just a decade ago the only wet wipes were for baby's bums. Now with society's need for cleanliness and convenience there has been an explosion of wipes for virtually every household chore and every part of the body. There are wipes for:

- facial cleansing wipes
- hand wipes
- car interiors
- pet paws
- clean wounds
- pain relief
- Deodorant-----

The main problem is that wipes are not biodegradable.

A recent Consumer Report put three wipes, along with toilet paper, through a disintegration test. It simulates what may happen when flushing and gives consumers a look at how the product could affect their pipes. These so-called flushable wipes perform very poorly in disintegration tests and are resulting in damage to our and our septic system.

Even if the product packaging states "it is flushable" pumpers have found hundreds of wipes matted together blocking our tanks. These products do not break down quickly enough, please be extremely careful about what you flush down the toilet.

Feminine products should be wrapped and disposed of in the bin provided. Facial wipes, baby wipes, hand wipes and paper towels should not be flushed down the toilet

PLEASE, to save on costly repairs only flush toilet paper down the toilet.
